COLONEL LOUIS A. WATRES

COMMANDING THIRTEENTH INFANTRY

LOUIS ARTHUR WATRES, president of the Scranton Savings Bank and Trust Company, and president of the Economy Light, Heat and Power Company, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, was born within ten miles of that city, in Mount Vernon, April 21, 1851.

His father, Louis S. Watres, was one of the first business men settled in the valley and one of the widest known men of that locality. His mother was the author of many beautiful poems, and, under the nom-de-plume of "Stella of Lackawanna," wrote the verses which since have been collected and bound in an attractive little volume entitled "Cob-webs."

Mr. Watres attended the public schools until he reached the age of sixteen years, when he was compelled to lay aside his books and enter the struggle for life. While yet a young man he became teller of the Merchants' and Mechanics Bank of Scranton, and in 1874 transferred his services to the Scranton Savings Bank and Trust Company, of which he became the cashier. During these employments what leisure he had was devoted to the study of law, and it was in order to enter the profession, that, in 1878, he resigned his position with the Trust Company. In three years from the time of his admission to the Lackawanna county Bar he became the county solicitor and retained that office from 1881 until 1890. In the meantime he secured an extensive practice and individually became so largely interested in various business enterprises that he virtually relinquished all of his practice except that relating to corporation law and equity cases, which became his specialties. Throughout all the years that have elapsed Mr. Watres had retained his connection with the Scranton Savings Bank and Trust Company, and now he stands at its head in the presidential office.

Mr. Watres is interested in various enterprises located in Scranton and throughout the Lackawanna and Luzerne valleys. Besides being president of the Trust Company just mentioned, he occupies the same official relation toward the Brookside Coal Company; the Spring Brook Water Supply Company; the Mansfield Water Company, and the Scranton and Pittston Traction Company. He is a Republican almost as a matter of course, but was twice elected to the State Senate from a Democratic district, and served in that body from 1883 to 1890. In the latter year he was elected lieutenant governor of Pennsylvania by a majority of over 22,000 votes, while the Democratic candidate for governor, Robert E. Pattison, was elected by the same poll. From 1891 to 1895 Mr. Watres was president of the State Senate and ex-officio president of the Board of Pardons; he was vice-president of the Pennsylvania World's Fair Commission and chairman of its executive committee. For fourteen years he was prominent as a member of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, and during the last four years of that period he served as general inspector of rifle practice, with the rank of colonel, upon the staff of Governor Beaver.

Colonel Watres, while Captain of Company A of the Regiment, was the first officer in the National Guard to insist that every man in his Company should be a marksman, and he promptly discharged any man who could not qualify as being physically disqualified. As inspector of Rifle Practice, during the administration of Governor Beaver, he took the same step and raised the marksmanship of the Guard from 1,300 to 6,400 marks-in four years. He was elected Colonel of the Eleventh Regiment, August, 1898, and upon the reorganization of the Thirteenth Regiment, August 20, 1899, was elected Colonel of that Regiment.

CAPTAIN DOLPH B. ATHERTON

Capt. Dolph B. Atherton was born in Montrose, Susquehanna county, July 22, 1858, and moved with his parents to Scranton, April 1, 1865. His early life was spent in the public schools of Scranton. At the age of 14 he accepted a position with the Delaware & Hudson Canal Co., as weigh-master, where he remained until 1882, when he was offered a position as bookkeeper for the Green Ridge Iron Works, of Scranton, Pa., continuing there until 1894; the last five years of which time he was General Manager of the Works.

In February, 1894, he was elected Secretary of the Scranton Board of Trade, which position he still holds.

On September 9, 1898, he was appointed Adjutant of the 11th Regiment, commanded by Col. L. A. Watres. After the return of the 13th Regiment from the service in the Spanish-American War and the subsequent reorganization of that Regiment, he was again tendered the position of Adjutant, which he accepted on August 25, 1899; he has shown remarkable ability as a departmental officer, especially for the limited experience he has had in military matters; his ability as an Adjutant is proving invaluable to Col. Watres.

ADJUTANT 13TH INFANTRY

THE NEW ARMORY

Contract has been awarded for the construction of a new armory for the 13th Regiment, N. G. P., at Scranton, Pa. It will cover a plot of ground 170′x 336′, with main entrance on Adams avenue, one side along Myrtle street, and extending through the entire block to Jefferson avenue. The outer walls will be of blue stone and brick, the stone to be "rock faced"—and the general design (as shown in the illustration herewith, of the Adams avenue front), is well calculated to give a strong, fortress-like appearance to the entire building—the administration part will be of four stories, facing Adams avenue; the ground floor containing field equipment rooms, armorer's room, a hundred yard rifle range (with tubes buried in the ground), Inspector of Rifle Practice office, a gymnasium, with swimming tank, shower baths, lockers, toilet rooms, etc. The fall in grade from Jefferson avenue to Adams avenue, being about 30 feet, there will be no excavation under the drill hall, the floor of which will be asphalt, laid on 6 inches of concrete, under which will be about two feet of steam cinders, flushed and rammed, so as to make a very solid floor.

The drill floor will be on a level with the second floor of the administration part of the building, each floor of which will be reached by broad stairways to right and left of the Adams avenue entrance. The second floor will contain the company parlors in front, next a wide corridor, then the company equipment rooms, reached from the corridor and also opening on to the drill floor. On the third floor front will be the administrative offices: Colonel, Adjutant, Surgeons (with separate room for examining recruits); general officers meeting room; quarters for battalion commanders and their adjutants; library, and special quarters for the veteran's organization.

The main corridor in rear of the administrative offices will open into a large gallery, from which an unobstructed view may be had the entire length of the drill hall. Another gallery, with equally good view, will be suspended from one of the roof trusses at the other end of the drill hall, the side walls will be carried up for about twenty feet, and the whole surmounted by a lantern roof so constructed as to provide abundance of light and ventilation. The drill floor will be about 156 feet by 256 feet in the clear, and as this floor will be solid, built up from the ground, of cinders, cement and asphalt, there will be practically no vibration transmitted to the building by the marching of troops thereon. As the drill floor, about midway of its length, will be level with the Myrtle street grade, a wide arched entrance will be provided in the side wall, with sliding doors inside, folding iron gates, and flanked by battlement towers similar in design to those shown in the cut. Thus it will be possible to march in and reached either by stairways from the drill floor level, or by entrance from Jefferson avenue. The fourth floor of the administrative part will contain a well equipped kitchen and pantry, with dumb waiter from the ground floor, a large mess hall, and a number of rooms that can be used for various purposes, such as band room, squad drill rooms, etc.

The roof of the drill hall will be supported by steel trusses of 156 feet span, with centre height above floor level of 52 feet. The ends of these trusses will reach the floor and rest upon heavy stone piers. Beyond these, column of fours, from the drill floor through this side entrance to street grade, without having to descend stairs to reach the main entrance on Adams avenue.

The entire building will be heated by steam from an adjoining plant, thus obviating the necessity of installing an interior generating plant, and will be piped for gas and wired for electricity.

Taken altogether, the 13th Regiment bids fair to have the finest armory in the State, at a cost, including the land, of not over $200,000.00.

MR. CONRAD SCHROEDER
Contractor and Builder 13th Regiment New Armory, Scranton

Mr. Conrad Schroeder, the well-known Contractor and Builder, has been awarded the contract of building the new 13th Regt. Armory in Scranton, a rough illustration of the same, is shown on page 4. Mr. Schroeder has constructed nearly all of the large buildings in the city of Scranton and is regarded as one of the leading builders in the country. Among the many buildings erected by Mr. Schroeder are the following: Hotel Jermyn, High School Building, Mears Building, Trader's Bank, Commonwealth Building, Connell Building, Court House, Oral School, City Building, The Building of the Scranton Republican, Board of Trade, Ella Park Church, Presbyterian Parsonage, Moses Taylor Hospital, Lackawanna County Jail, Judge Hands' Residence and T. H. Watkins' Residence.

Mr. Francis C. Schroeder is associated with his father in the business and is a very able assistant; much of the practical work of the 13th Regiment's new Armory will be supervised by young Mr. Schroeder.

LT. WILL T. REES
Battery "B" stationed at Pittsburgh

LIEUT. WILL T. REES

Lieut. Will T. Rees was born July 28, 1872, and at 14 years of age he organized two companies of cadets, 70 boys in each company, known as the Sherman Infantry, and was elected Captain for four years in succession of one of these companies. In 1890, all growing too old to remain as cadets, they disbanded by mutual consent and a majority of the boys entered the National Guard, each going where he wished, some to the 14th, some to the 18th, and some to Battery "B," and in less than a year over 100 of the Cadets were serving in the Guard. He enlisted in "B" Battery June 9, 1890; appointed Corporal July 14, 1893; Sergeant June 14, 1895; Quartermaster-Sergeant October, 1895; was mustered with Battery in United States service as Sergeant, May 8, 1898; discharged by muster out of Battery November 28, 1898; was appointed First Sergeant on muster of Battery into the Guard, December 19, 1898; elected Second Lieutenant March 6, 1899.

CAPT. LOUIS T. MATTES

Louis T. Mattes enlisted in Company "D," Scranton City Guard, October 3, 1877, serving as "marker," then as fifer and bugler, then as private in the ranks. Appointed Sergeant of Company "D," 13th Regiment Infantry, January 31, 1881; discharged November 15, 1882. Enlisted in Company "A," 13th Regiment, March 25, 1889; appointed Corporal, May 12, 1890; Sergeant, November 2, 1891; Battalion Adjutant, June 22, 1893; reappointed, October 12, 1893, and April 29, 1895; appointed Regimental Adjutant July 15, 1895. Mustered into United States service at Mt. Gretna, Pa., May 5, 1898, as First Lieutenant and Adjutant, 13th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers Infantry. Acting Assistant Adjutant General, Third Brigade, First Division, Second Army Corps, at Camp Alger, Va. Served also at Camp Meade, Pa., and Camp Mackenzie, Augusta, Ga., and was mustered out with the Regiment March 11, 1899. Contracted typhoid fever while at Camp Meade and was laid up for three months. Commissioned Captain and Adjutant, 13th Regiment, N. G. P., June 6, 1899, and now on the retired list.

LIEUT. EZRA H. RIPPLE, JR.

At the outbreak of the Spanish War he was in the Pennsylvania Military College at Chester, Pa., and within three months of graduation, but being anxious to take part in the war received permission to enlist. He enlisted in the 13th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and served through the war in that regiment. Promotion was not very rapid, and he was a Corporal when discharged. A short time after his return home, on the reorganization of the 13th Regiment, he again went back into Company "D," and on November 3, 1899, was elected Second Lieutenant, and on May 4, 1900, First Lieutenant of his Company. He is an enthusiast in military matters and is looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to the dedication of the new Armory.

THE next issue is devoted entirely to the Encampment and will contain special illustrations of prominent officials, etc.

THE several business firms in the city of Harrisburg, alleging favoritism on the part of Col. Robbins, Commissary General of the State, in awarding contracts for camp supplies is without foundation, a careful investigation having been made, we find that all orders were judiciously placed in the interest of the State service.

THE horse used by Major Morris F. Cawley during his Porto Rican campaign met with such severe injury during the unloading of the Transport, that it was found necessary to kill the animal. There are a number of cases like this throughout the State, and several attempts have been made by the officers to recover the amount incurred by said loss from the United States Government, but very little result has been obtained. Concerted action will be taken in the near future to establish claim for all such losses during the Spanish-American War, by Pennsylvania officers.

SUMMARY courts in the 2d and 3d Brigades are meeting with considerable success and are having a wholesome effect on delinquents. Col. O'Neill of the 4th Infantry has already turned in a considerable sum to the State Treasury, accruing from these fines, Lieut. Hartung of the 2d Infantry has established a like court; this is the only one in the 1st Brigade and many city officers are anxiously awaiting the results obtained in this direction by the 2d Infantry.

IN commenting on the inspection reports, we can only say, that we are still under the impression that the best system would be to have an army officer detailed to inspect the entire guard, thus assuring a uniform rating throughout, the best evidence of a necessary change in the system of inspections is shown by the following figures. In the First Brigade only one Company is rated over ninety, in the Second, seventeen, and in the Third, thirty-eight.

Personal Mention

Lieut. William Knox, Company A, 1st Infantry, received the unanimous vote of the Company at the election for Captain.

Lieut. Herbert Cox, formerly I. R. P. of the 13th Infantry, is now located at Lebanon in charge of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Co.'s plant.

Carbondale is putting in a strong claim for an Infantry Company, attached to the 13th, to take the place of the one recently disbanded at Tunkhannock.

Company "E," 4th Infantry, located at Hamburg, Captain Seaman, is in splendid condition. They have a roll of 58 and draw from the adjacent country.

The members of the State Naval Force did most of their rifle practice while the troops were in camp, this gave them an excellent opportunity and the exclusive use of the 1st Regiment's Rifle Range.

It is more than likely that a general reorganization of the guard will follow the encampment, five companies of one of the 3d Brigade Regiments will be retained and assigned to the two ten-company Regiments, the regimental organization will, of course, be disbanded.

The original intention of the 14th and 18th Regiments to wear Khaki uniforms during encampment was deemed inexpedient, owing to the fact, that no order was ever issued by the State authorities officially recognizing the same, it was therefore decided to purchase the fibre dyed suit issued by the State.

The firm of P. F. Eisenbrown, Sons & Co., of Reading, Pa., are, perhaps, the best known manufacturers of monuments, sarcophagi and cemetery memorials in the United States, their pneumatic tools and polishing mills are well worth seeing; this celebrated firm were the successful bidders and contractors for the magnificent soldiers and sailors monuments at Easton and Williamsport, Pa.

Lieut. Col. Frederick W. Stillwell, 13th Infantry, has offered a very handsome trophy in the shape of a solid silver loving cup, beautifully designed, and a centre engraving, representing the regimental badge, this is intended to stimulate revolver practice among the officers. The match is confined to the three battalions of the 13th Regiment, so far the 3d Battalion is in the lead.

Lieut. Col. Chas. Mattes, with a number of retired officers of the 13th Infantry, are formulating plans for the organization of a veteran corps to be officially known as "The Veteran Scranton City Guard," they will have commodious quarters in the new armory, when finished, and as many of the representative business men of the city of Scranton have been identified with the regiment for the last twenty years, it is expected that at least one hundred names will be presented at the time of organizing.

Surgeon Major Fulton and his two assistants, Dr. Keller and Dr. Blanchard, have just finished a very successful series of instruction to the Hospital Corps of the 13th Regiment, the first was arresting hemorrhages and applying first aid dressings. The next taken up was the art of making extemporized dressings of bones. Location of great blood vessels and treatment of faintness and treatment of heat exhaustion and sun stroke. Reviving those who have been under water. The instruction concluded by preparing poultices, sterilizing dressings, and instructions in taking the temperature and cooking food for the sick. It is said that this is one of the best schools ever held in the Regiment.

The Field Staff and Line of the 4th Infantry assembled at the Mansion House, Reading, Pa., on July 21st, for the purpose of a general discussion on matters pertaining to the best interests of the command; the day being an intensely hot one, the local officers of Companies A and I invited their brother officers to luncheon on Mt. Penn, which is about 1700 feet above sea level, and suggested that the meeting be held on the mountain top. It is needless to say that Col. O'Neill not only appreciated the suggestion, but at once proceeded there by way of the "Gravity." Business matters of the Regiment were thoroughly discussed, and it is said that it was the most harmonious gathering of officers of our "Fighting Fourth" that has taken place for some time.

Quite a controversy is taking place between Major Holmes (who was formerly Captain of Company K., located at Saint Clair), of the 8th Infantry, and Captains Forney and Duffey, respective successors of the Major, regarding a mess tent that was purchased by the citizens of Saint Clair and presented to Company K, of the 8th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. After the muster of this organization, it is claimed that the members constituting the Company presented Captain Forney with the mess tent, inasmuch as the citizens of Saint Clair had presented the same to the United States Company that Company K of the National Guard of Pennsylvania had no interest in the matter whatever, and Captain Forney was privileged to use the mess tent in question as he saw fit. Captain Forney subsequently sold the tent to Captain William A. Raub, of the 13th Infantry, for $65, Captain Raub holding the receipt for the same. Captain Duffey, of the present Company K, who served as First Lieutenant in the Company during its service in the Spanish-American War, claims an equity in the tent, and in order to establish his claim, caused Captain Forney's arrest.

The matter will be laid before the Adjutant General for a final decision as to who the rightful owner is.

Ever Wonderful Niagara Falls

Ten Dollar—Ten Day Trips via Philadelphia & Reading—Lehigh Valley Route.

Niagara Falls, one of nature's most wonderful and majestic sights, never fails in interest, however often visited, the visitor always observing new and interesting sights not noticed before.

For the season of 1900 the Philadelphia & Reading Railway has arranged a series of Ten Day Excursions, at the popular price of Ten Dollars for the round trip, giving the excursionists the privilege on the return trip of a stop-off at Buffalo, Rochester Junction (for Rochester), Geneva, Burdette (for Watkin's Glen) and at Mauch Chunk.

The dates for these excursions have been arranged as follows: August 16th, September 1st and 13th and October 6th.

The special train of Pullman Parlor Cars and Fine Day Coaches leaves Reading Terminal 8.30 A. M., arriving at Allentown 10.15 A. M., where passenger can connect from Reading, stations on main line above Reading, and on Lebanon Valley and East Penn Branches, and passing by daylight through the picturesque Lehigh and Wyoming Valleys, aptly styled "The Switzerland of America," reaches Niagara Falls the same evening.

The grand panorama, as viewed from the car windows, of fertile farming lands and magnificent mountain scenery, interspersed here and there with hamlets, running streams and placid lakes and ponds is of itself well worth the cost of the entire trip, and Niagara Falls—who ever attempted to describe them and could give an anyway near adequate description of their many wonders and beauties?

THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR----BLOCKADES AND COAST DEFENSE.

By SENERO GOMEZ NUNEZ, Captain of Artillery
[Translated from the Spanish.]

The blockade as practiced in Cuba caused a thousand times more victims and more horrors than bursting shells, the burning of cities, the massacre of battles, and all the cruelties of weapons. The blockade makes living expensive, extinguishes the means of livelihood, gradually decimates the population, destroys family life, annihilates human beings without distinction—or rather, with one distinction, for it strikes particularly the feeble, the children, the women, and the sick.

Let the observations I made on the subject of the practice of naval blockades, the most important of modern times, be taken into consideration when the "humanizers" of war meet again, and let them not only take thought of regulating the use of bursting shell and the protection of real property, but also give a prominent part in their deliberations to the humanizers of the blockade as far as it affects those who should not be made to suffer the rigors of war in a brutal manner; for it is brutal to reduce to starvation and death human beings who have no share in the conflict and are in no manner responsible for it.

In our opinion, absolute blockades should be limited to fortified cities and harbors, and as far as towns are concerned there should be restrictions on the introduction of men, arms, ammunition, and war supplies; but it is not humane to extend these restrictions to food, medicines, and clothing for the noncombatant inhabitants.

In the Spanish-American war the whole enormity of the effects of the blockade become apparent in the frightful mortality. After two months of blockade in Cuba there could be seen in the cities and in the country thousands of human beings looking like ghosts, and men, women, and children dying of hunger in the public roads. A sad contrast to the condition of that war, fought on the pretext of humanity!

We will now leave this subject to speak of the advantage and influence which the mistakes and incompetence of the men at the head of our affairs and the scantiness and deficiency of our war resources had on the United States plans of campaign.

CHAPTER III.

The first signal of "Hostile squadron in sight" was made by the semaphore at Morro Castle on Friday, April 22, at 5 o'clock p. m., while, strange to say, it was not until Monday, the 25th, that President McKinley signed the joint resolution declaring that war between the United States and Spain had commenced on the 21st.

From the telemetric observatory of Morro Castle we witnessed the first appearance of the enemy and closely followed the movements of the hostile ships, the vague outlines of which could be seen on the horizon. The gunners stood in readiness to fire and all were waiting for the moment when fire would be opened; but to everybody's surprise the United States ships kept beyond range, at a distance of about 20,000 meters from the batteries, and in that position they remained the next day. It was evident that they were refusing battle and that their plan of campaign was founded on the blockade.

It was well known that one of the enemy's most ardent desires was to take Habana as early as possible. Why was the enterprise delayed? Why were the tactics changed?

In order to explain this we must begin by giving some interesting data.

The Naval Annual—a very important book which has been published for fifteen years by T. A. Brassey—furnishes us certain antecedents, to which we shall refer.

The nominal forces of the two belligerent fleets was believed to be approximately equal.

The hostile squadron which made its appearance off Habana was the so-called North Atlantic Squadron, which had for months been in process of organization at Hampton Roads, carrying out practices along the coasts of Florida, and after the blowing up of the Maine it was stationed at Key West, a few hours' distance from the Cuban shore.

We have already spoken of the composition of this squadron in the first part of this work. It was under the command of Mr. Sampson, at that time captain, who was very anxious to attack Habana, although he is said to have expressed the opinion that the battle of Habana would have to be fought at the expense of some of his ships, and in view of the equality which was supposed to exist between the United States naval forces and those of Spain and the recent loss of the Maine, that would have been a serious calamity.

The squadron was admirably officered. But the United States Government decided, very wisely, to try the crews first and give them additional training, and not send them at once into a battle which could not help but be fierce, without initiating them by means of less difficult operations in which the victory would be sure and complete, and where the gunners would acquire greater facility in firing. This was the more important as the Maine catastrophe, in which 266 sailors lost their lives, had given rise to certain fantastic legends that Cuba and its ports were full of mines and torpedoes which could sow death and destruction everywhere and at all times.

The principle prevailed which underlay the plan of campaign described in the first chapter, namely, that before proceeding directly against Cuba it would be necessary to fight naval battles to see whose was the preponderance on the sea. This will also explain why the Americans kept their ships so close together and why Sampson's squadron always remained near the Flying Squadron, which was under Schley's orders, so that the two fleets, in case of necessity, might be able to co-operate in a battle against the Spanish fleet with overwhelming superiority. As we go on we shall see that the plan was carried out in full.

For this reason it would have been of great advantage if those who had charge of conducting the war on the Spanish side had made efforts to divide the United States squadron, which could surely have been accomplished by permitting privateering or resorting to the system adopted by the United States, namely, disguising privateers in the shape of auxiliary vessels, for while some of these auxiliary vessels were commanded by regular naval officers, like the St. Paul, which had been given to Captain Sigsbee, of the Maine, the majority of them were commanded by officers of a special corps of reserves formed of active and retired sailors of the merchant marine. What was there to prevent us from giving the same character to our merchant vessels and following the example of our enemies, who thus equipped for war not less than 128 vessels? If it is true, as maintained by some, that privateering is no longer any use in our time, why were our enemies so anxious that we should not resort to it? And why did we reserve the right to practice it?

A few score auxiliary vessels would have constituted a menace to commerce, which the Americans worship, and would have compelled their squadrons to subdivide and operate without that close correlation which gave them so much strength. A threat of operations against the undefended ports of Florida or against the United States fleet at the Philippines—anything in the nature of naval strategy or plan of campaign—should have been resorted to, so as to make at least an attempt to scatter Sampson's and Schley's squadrons.

Nothing of all this was thought of; or if it was the people did not hear of it. If there was any fixed and concerted plan of campaign, if every resource of intelligence was exhausted in formulating it, it has not come to the knowledge of the general public, and thus, while the American people are already in possession of official reports rendering an account of everything that has happened, of the expenses incurred, the injuries suffered, we know nothing at all except what we see before our eyes in the evidence of our terrible débacle. We must envy the system of other nations, for obviously we have among us none who are capable of imitating it.

The opinion which Sir George Clarke formed of the naval capacity of Spain is pitiful, and it has gone abroad and become the opinion of the world on the strength of his authority.

"In Spain," says the Naval Annual," some efforts of preparation were made, but want of money, of resources, and of administrative capacity proved fatal. At the beginning of 1898 there was not a single completely effective war ship, and in home waters there was no organized squadron. The isolated force in the Far East, composed mainly of obsolete craft, of which the flagship was scarcely the equal of our Active, was not, in the modern sense, a real fighting body. The efficiency of a navy, involving the fulfillment of exceedingly complex conditions, is a delicate test of sound government and of national vigor. Spain throughout her history, in spite of great natural advantages, has never proved able to create and maintain a really efficient fleet."

We think these statements are a little exaggerated. There was a time when Spain was all-powerful on the sea. Everyone knows the causes of our decline. As far as the present time is concerned, Brassey's opinion is correct and is confirmed by the sad facts of a terribly disastrous conflict. But we will not yet despair; we still think that days of rejoicing and glory may return if we can become convinced that morality and order and good government are the basis of the civil and military prosperity of nations.

The Americans had a pretty accurate idea of our deficiencies, thanks to information received from intelligent spies operating in Spain.
